Business Review Given Rotarians By Hope Bankers

Local Cash Condition Is Described As Best Since 1921

NET ON NEXT CROP

Production Costs To Be Very Cheap For Farmer Next Year

The cashiers of Hope's three banks have an interesting report on the business outlook at the Rotary luncheon Friday in Hotel Barlow.

"National business is suffering from over-caution rather than distress," declared Lloyd Spencer of the First National Bank. "There is not much to worry about in Hempstead county. In my opinion 90 per cent of our farmers will pay their current debts. Local business will probably continue low until the fall of 1931; but the next crop will be produced as cheap as any crop in history, and should be profitable."

Good Cash Condition

"The cash condition of the Hope banks is the best since I have been here. This is in marked contrast with their condition in 1921, when the banking business was overextended," Mr. Spencer went on to give some interesting figures about national business. "Four national motor finance corporations," he said, "handled $500,000,000 of installment paper in 1929. Their past-due paper that year amounted to only one-third of 1 per cent. Past-due paper this year amounts to only one-half of one per cent."

Actual business operations are still suffering from a buyers' strike.

"Clean exports for the first quarter of this year were 25 per cent under the same period of 1929. The profits of leading national companies for the first half of this year were 25 per cent less than for the same period in 1929—however, they were only 3 per cent under 1928. Allowing for the extraordinary success of 1929, the current year is not much off from normal."

Manufacturing has been curtailed even with or less than commodity demands. However, the production of farm staples continues about the same, and naturally prices are much lower.

The drought cutting into farm production, may help to correct this condition for better prices next year.

C. C. Spragins, of the Citizen National Bank, described the current business of business as possibly a blessing in disguise. He recalled the effort of the banking business all over Arkansas to persuade the farmers to scatter their resources among more crops than merely cotton, and said that diversification would probably obtain more converts than ever next season.

More Watermelons

"We are famous as a watermelon country," he said, "yet we should grow a much larger crop than we do. Georgia, with its vast melon production, goes to market ahead of us; and here, the market is fairly clear and prices are good. Southwest of Texas produces many melons also, but its great distance from market gives Hempstead county an advantage in lower freight rates."

Roy Anderson, of the Arkansas Bank & Trust Co., rapped the over-emphasis of installment buying, which embarrasses the average family when hard times come along. He also attacked the policy of certain leading American industrial companies, which has accomplished the purchase of 2,000 European plants, where cheap European labor is put to work on American ideas and American machinery in competition with American labor in American plants.

Mr. Anderson compared the average family's indulgence in installment buying to a common sense family budget gotten out by a national insurance company. Budgeting a $200-a-month income leaves the following divisions, he said: 25 per cent for food; 20 per cent shelter; 10 per cent clothing; 10 per cent operating expense (incidentals); 10 per cent insurance; 10 per cent development (reading, culture); 10 per cent investment.

Rotary club was delightfully entertained today by Miss Eleanor Foster in a group of songs, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Kate Scott Holland. Her guests were: Earl Harrison, of Ivern, and O. R. Duff of Shreveport. Frank Ward was chairman of the program committee, and President George W. Ware presided over the meeting.

The forthcoming Farmers' School of the International Harvester company was endorsed by the club, on motion of Talbot Field.

Carroll-ing for Joy

Here is the enthusiastic greeting that awaited Earl Carroll, Broadway producer, after a New York grand jury had refused to indict him and members of his revue on charges of giving a "lewd and indecent show." Carroll, with back turned, holds in his right arm pretty Faith Bacon, whose much-discussed "fan dance" was one of the scenes in his current show that led to a police raid on the New Amsterdam theater. At the left are Frances Joyce and Kay Carroll.

MANY EYE WITNESSES

Coroner to Hold Inquest at Hot Springs Late This Afternoon

HOT SPRINGS, Aug. 15.—(AP)—Dave Golden, 64, was held in jail here this morning in connection with the death of John Outler, 24.

Golden is alleged to have saturated the clothes of Outler with gasoline and then set fire to him during a drinking party at Cedar Glades, a resort twenty-five miles north of here.

Several persons who were eye witnesses to the affair are in Hot Springs today, where they will testify before a coroner's inquest jury to be held this afternoon.

Deputy Sheriff Marion Anderson, quoted Clint Martin resident of Cedar Glades as saying, "Golden threw the gasoline on Outler, then struck a match and the fire of the young man's clothing began immediately."

The youth, conscious almost three hours in a hospital here before he died, told his father the circumstances which led up to a quarrel between he and Golden.

Officers said Golden had been under arrest several times within the past several years on liquor charges and that he was known in the community in which he lived as a "trouble maker."

The body of Miss Baker was found in a culvert near Arlington cemetery. Her coupe was found nearby, which resulted in a clue leading to the body.

Sacks That Held Bank Loot Found

The Police Believe Laurel, Miss., Teller Left For Detroit

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 15.—(AP)—Mobile police investigating disappearance of Edward Jackson, 26, head teller of the First National Bank of Laurel, Miss., with $71,000 of the bank's funds, and subsequent discovery in Hall Mills creek of mail sacks belonging to the bank, announced today that a man giving his name as Johnson, but believed to have been John H. Jackson of Mobile, father of the missing Mississippi, bought an automobile from a motor car agency here and paid for it in $5 bills.

After purchasing the car the man got a salesman from the automobile agency to drive the machine as far as Waynesboro, Miss., with both the Jacksons as occupants, according to information obtained by police. The elder Jackson was sought by authorities immediately after his son had been discovered missing from the Mississippi bank.

Chief of Police Warren Burch said a young man answering the description of the younger Jackson was reported to have been picked up here in the automobile after it had been purchased. The chief's office was seeking to learn Thursday the location at which Edward Jackson was alleged to have been picked up.

The salesman who drove the two men to Waynesboro was reported to have been told by the occupants of the car that they were going to Detroit, Michigan.

Advices from Laurel said a great portion of the missing $71,000 was in bills of $5 denomination.

The mail sacks were found floating in the creek Wednesday by Julius Corrales. They immediately were identified as property of the Laurel bank.

Missing Couple and $70,000 Safe

Mystery cloaked the return of Charles Kern, 80, wealthy retired bakery owner, and Mrs. Kern, above, to their home in St. Louis, allaying fears that they had been kidnaped by a gang of swindlers. The Kerns, who carried a $70,000 bank draft to be used in a real estate transaction in Toledo, disappeared from a train at Defiance, Ohio, and were missing for two days while police combed gangland haunts in the belief that they were held captive. Kern refused to reveal where he and his wife had been.

Triple Slayer, 65, Is Electrocuted

Legal Battles Have Been Been Fought in Courts Since 1928

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 15.—(AP)—W. H. (Bill) Howell, aged Crawford county triple slayer paid his debt to the state of Arkansas this morning with his life.

Howell was strapped in the chair at 7:05 a. m. and four minutes later was pronounced dead.

Howell walked unassisted into the electrocution chamber and in a composed manner said: "They are going to kill this old body, but it will live again." Later as the straps were made secure about him, in words barely discernible, he said, "peace on earth good will to men."

Two shocks were administered before he was pronounced dead.

No friends or relatives or any persons from Crawford county were present at the execution.

Many legal battles have been fought and lost over the case.

Howell was indicted in Crawford county for the shotgun killing of three persons, Cliff Deffenbaugh, superintendent of the Crawford county infirmary, Mrs. Deffenbaugh and Jeff Nicholson, an aged inmate. He was tried for the murder of Nicholson only convicted and sentenced to death. Revenge for his expulsion from the infirmary was Howell's motive for the crime, the state charged.

A long legal fight ended in the state supreme court upholding his conviction and the results of two sodity hearings conducted by Warden Todhunter at which he was found to be sane.

Compress Men Defend New Receiving Rate

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 15.—(AP)—Alonso Bennett, traffic manager of the Federal Compress and Warehouse Company, said yesterday that a revision of compress charges in Arkansas was decided upon to restore the former 30-day rate uniform in compresses in other states, after it was found that a special 15-day rate, put into effect in Arkansas last year as an experiment did not pay.

"Last year we established a new tariff in Arkansas that fixed the cost of weighing and sampling at 25 cents, with storage free," Mr. Bennett said. "The rate at our compress in Tennessee and other states remained at 30 cents for 30 days."

Our Enemies In Peace

WE HAVE TALKED preparedness for a long time. Now we are realizing its need. Not only in war in which life is taken, as we have commonly thought of it, but in a field that is distinctly more practical and humanitarian.

Movable water tanks, which have been placed in commission at army posts in the Fifth Corps Area, were ordered used for hauling water for livestock in the nearby drought-stricken areas in Ohio.

When winds refuse to blow up a cooling shower . . . when the blue-green waters of the ponds under deep trees turn to muddy brown and the leaves of their shelter wither when the troughs from which they drink no longer have a refreshing flood of cold water, livestock suffer more cruelly than if a marauding army had plunged across the fields.

We are discovering that it is as important to keep prepared in time of peace as in time of war. Not all of our enemies are wearing helmets and carrying bayonets. We have the elements and pestilences to combat. They are distinctly more deadly.

WHY NOT MARSHAL our men and resources and be prepared to make war on these enemies when the time comes? They will conquer it in the end if we don't. The government is justified in keeping a reserve of men and supplies ready for such combat as surely as it is in sending the marines to protect our citizens and their property in foreign lands.

Instruments of warfare have proved their use more than once in time of peace. America has gone to battle very often when the enemy wasn't an army that advanced under another flag.

Down in Panama, the cleaning up of the swamps abolished disease. It took the maneuvers of an army, the skill of generalship, the bravery and daring of a gallant soldiery to combat that fever pestilence. But it was done.

If we are going to be happy in time of peace it begins to look as though we must prepare for war. For some strange reason we hesitate to make ready to meet an invader that isn't human. We will prepare for war, though. We could avoid this roundabout method of achieving our end if we would face the dangers of peace as readily as we do those of war.

Fees and The Issue

SENATOR FESS, with characteristic courage, has hit his stride as chairman of the Republican national committee. He says he is ready to go to war with the fool Democrats for the control of Congress. The fight will be one of issues rather than one of personality as good as another to Senator Fess.

What are the issues?

Certainly not prohibition, says the senator. Prohibition is a question on which the people feel strongly therefore it must not be mentioned in the campaign. If it is mentioned out of necessity, Senator Fess will not quarrel with candidates for the side they take. Deserving Republicans in New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts, Illinois, Wisconsin and Montana may be wet, while deserving Republicans in Kansas, Nebraska and one or two other places may be dry, Senator Fess will not be disturbed.

Certainly not the World Court, says the senator. It must be admitted that the Ohio chieftain has a heart and a dash of chivalry. He would not think of hurting Mrs. McCormick's feelings by urging candidates to stand by the president on this issue. He must also think of Senator Moses.

What, then, are the issues?

Farm relief and the tariff, says the senator.

What brand of farm relief, and what version of the tariff the senator does not say.

In Nebraska Senator Fess' lieutenants will favor the export debenture, while in Massachusetts the word will be passed around that the farmer must work out his own salvation just like business men.

The tariff makes an admirable issue. In Pennsylvania there is a strong feeling that the Hawley-Smoot rates are too low. Candidate Davis can quiet the electorate by promising relief by means of the flexible provision. In Kansas there is a strong feeling that the rates are too high. Candidate Capper has already soothed the electorate by promising relief by means of the flexible provision.

But above all issues is the loyalty of the candidates to the president. Senator Fess will turn loose his sloganers when the campaign warms up. "He kept us out of the panic" is about as good as any.—Commercial Appeal.

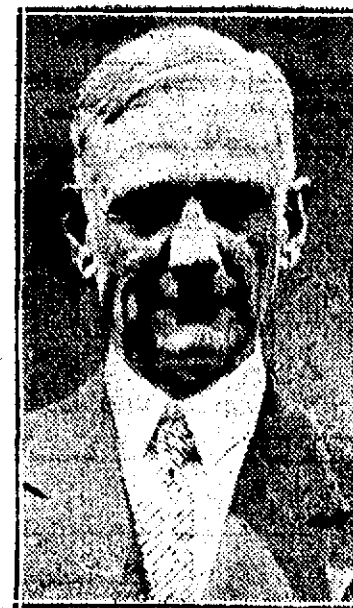

If you would be prepared for a deluge of pithy comment on weather conditions in South America, it is well to be advised that it snowed in Chile the other day.

The Yarks Are Coming!

Acts to Aid Farmers

Busy mobilizing the government's forces to bring relief to drought-blighted areas of the country, Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde is pictured above as he called at the White House to confer with President Hoover. He has ordered a survey of the stricken regions by county agents in order to determine the extent of the damage done to crops by the protracted dry spell.

Fact for today: The Scotch are most eagerly sought as life guards because they are such a saving people.

A man living in Woolwich, England, has made his own coffin and sleeps in it to be sure it fits. There's a fellow who likes his bier.

There's no reason to believe that the Washington boy who made a violin from 2500 matches was trying to make light of music.

During his campaign, a candidate in Arkansas gave out sandwiches which poisoned 60 persons. The guess is they were filled with bolony.

British police are said to be puzzled by the unusually large number of paintings stolen this year. So it seems even British is not above an oil scandal.

Farmers in an Illinois town reported that potatoes they dug during the hot spell had been baked by the sun. After such a burn, of course, the skin peeled itself.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Another election possibility has smitten Washington with both delight and consternation, the former emotion being that of the wets and the latter that of the dries.

The possibility is that in the next Congress the three congressional districts which surround the District of Columbia will each have a wet representative in the House.

Of course that would not be any body blow to prohibition, but it would not look very nice. The high prohibition enforcement officials of the nation and the chiefs of the big dry organizations here simply wouldn't be able to leave Washington without riding through or passing over wet territory, and the psychological effect of that might come to have an unfortunate influence.

The eighth Virginia district, one of the three, is the home congressional district of the late George Washington. The other two are the fifth and sixth Maryland.

Washington Interested

Washington is always interested in these nearby counties. Thousands of folks who work here live in the counties adjacent. Most other Washingtonians either have summer shacks in the three bordering congressional districts or spend their Sundays on motor jaunts over Maryland and Virginia roads and get to know the country as well as the streets of this city. Much of the food consumed here comes from farms in the same territory. To say nothing of the rye whiskey, which is distilled and shipped here from all three districts.

The fifth Maryland district, which includes Montgomery, St. Mary's, Prince Georges and Anne Arundel counties, will be represented by a wet in any event. That seems appropriate. St. Mary's county produces the famous product known as "S. M. R." The initials stand for "St. Mary's rye" or "Southern Maryland rye," as you will. When a good citizen goes to jail in St. Mary's county he is allowed out, during the day, but forced to come in at night. If he happens to be a newly-married man who is still in love with his wife he is given the option of spending his days in jail and nights at home.

Anyway, that district is now represented by Congressman Stephen W. Gammill, and his opponent for November, A. K. Love, the Republican leader of St. Mary's county—recently joined Gammill in the wet ranks.

Congressman Frederick N. Zihlman of the sixth Maryland is a dry, and he will be opposed in November by former Congressman David J. Lewis, one-time member of the tariff commission, who used to be a dry, but lately announced his conviction that prohibition was a failure and must either be thoroughly revamped or abandoned.

Zihlman May Reconsider

One hears that Zihlman may reconsider his views on prohibition, too, but in any event Lewis will be giving him a strong contest in the fall campaign. His district includes Montgomery and Frederick counties.

In the eighth Virginia, bordering the capital on the south, with Arlington and Fairfax counties nearby, two dries and three wets are running for the Democratic nomination, which ordinarily is equivalent to election. The large supply of wet candidates is at least indicative of the fact that some persons see an increase of wet sentiment. They are all after the seat of Congressman R. Walton Moore, who is retiring voluntarily.

Judge Howard W. Smith and State Senator Frank L. Ball are the dry candidates. Thomas R. Keith, prominent Fairfax lawyer, and Crandall Mackey and E. H. DeJannette are the wets.

Facts are such stern and stubborn things, impervious to whim or plea. Princesses and presidents and kings subservient to them must be. Nor wind, nor fire, nor time nor tide can alter an established fact. Tho by ten million tongues denied it still remains unchanged, intact. The ugliest mountains from afar are sometimes glorious to see, but ugly facts still ugly are. And ugly to the end will be. Man shapes his fancies as he wills. Finds beauty where it may not be. A white cloud slips above the hills—To him it is a ship at sea. A fact to please him will not change. Fancy will dance at man's request. Then can it seem to very strange. That man should love his fancies best.

Wounded Badly In Duel With Officer

Alleged Prowler Will Likely Recover From Injuries Received

HOT SPRINGS, Aug. 15.—Although suffering from bullet wounds in the abdomen, right hip, left arm near the wrist and part of his jaw shot away, James Q. Murphy, aged 52, who engaged Officer Charles Robbins in a pistol duel about 2:30 yesterday morning in the rear of the Hot Springs confectionery, will recover, it was said by physicians at Leo N. Levi hospital last night.

Robbins and Night Capt. Marion Cook were in the confectionery when a nemphoe told them a prowler was on the roof. Robbins went to the rear, flashed his flashlight on Murphy and ordered him to come down. Murphy did so, and when he reached the ground fired on the officer with a .45 caliber automatic. Robbins dropped at the first shot and was not hit. Robbins, using a German Luger, returned Murphy's fire. Although badly wounded, Murphy managed to reach his apartment in a local rooming house, where he was arrested by Capt. Cook and Robbins.

Murphy told newspaper men Thursday that he was drunk and had gone on the roof to find a place to sleep. He admitted he tried to shoot the officer.

Warren Summerville, known to police as "Airplane Slim" and said to be a pal of Murphy, was arrested today. Officers hoped to obtain from him some information as to Murphy's actions and whereabouts of late. No charge was placed against Summerville.

DERMOTT, Aug. 14.—Charles Gibson and Edward Higgins, employees of the McPhillips Jones Drug Company, left here at 6:25 p. m. yesterday on a bicycle bound for Little Rock to congratulate Harvey Parnell on his re-nomination, fulfilling a bet that the two had made, the loser to pedal and the winner to ride the handle bars. Gibson had to pedal.

A large crowd assembled to see them off, also following them as far north as McGeehee and Dumas. They expect to arrive in Little Rock today afternoon about 4 or 5 and will go to the governor's office, thence to the Boren Bicycle Company, which furnished the bicycle for the trip. They will return home by train. Higgins had a large sign on his back which read, "Harvey Parnell, I win." Gibson had a sign reading, "Brooks Hays, I lose."

Roy Anderson To Get Trip To Cuba

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson Leave Monday for Havana and Caribbean

R. H. Carter, superintendent of agents of the Home Life Insurance company of Arkansas, announced today that Roy Anderson had made a double qualification in the company's 1930, $200,000 club. This year the company gives to all qualifying agents a trip to Havana, Cuba and points on the Caribbean sea.

Mr. Anderson will be accompanied on the trip by Mrs. Anderson and they will leave Monday for Little Rock where they will join approximately forty-five other agents of the company who will make the trip, including wives of several agents and a number of home office officials, Mr. Carter said the party will number approximately fifty-five persons.

From Little Rock the agents will go direct to Memphis where a special train will be waiting to take them to New Orleans. Immediately upon arriving in the "Crescent City" the visitors will breakfast at the hotel Metropole before proceeding by special motor coaches on a sightseeing tour of the city. The sea cruise will begin at noon when the insurance party will meet at the docks and board the deluxe steamship Atenas, premier liner of the Great White Fleet.

Friday August 22, will be spent in Havana. Here several interesting sightseeing tours have been arranged which include visits to Colon cemetery, Marianao Beach and the tropical gardens. The following morning the Atenas will steam out of Havana for Port of Cortez, a port five-hundred miles south in the Caribbean. This harbor will be reached on the afternoon of August 24, and here the club members will board a special train for LaLima, where they will visit one of the large sugar mills owned by the United Fruit company.

The Home Life Insurance company is one of the outstanding financial institutions of the south-west. Since its establishment by A. B. Banks in 1900, the company has experienced remarkable growth. It has more than fifty millions of insurance in force, and operates in five south-western states. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will make the entire cruise with the Home Life party and will arrive in Hope August 30.

"Farmers want assurance of provisions for the planting of next year's crop," Mr. King said. HOOKS & SLIDES

by William Braucher

You're Lucky
When the breaks go against you, as they do with all of us at times, don't go around telling people you're unlucky. Just think of Walter Johnson and keep your mouth shut.
Recently Walter's wife died after a short illness. A short time before that Walter's oldest son, Walter, Jr., broke both legs in an automobile accident. A short time before that Walter himself was in a wheelchair, suffering from the effects of influenza and an infected foot. Just before that he had been sent down to Newark, after 20 years of the finest kind of big league pitching for a second division ball team, and at Newark was cast in the role of manager of an indifferent ball team that never could get anywhere.
Old Barney's career has been beset by cruel pranks of fortune. For years, the greatest pitcher in the game, he bore his burden unflinchingly, pitching for a mediocre team. There never was a complaint from the Big Train. He went about his business with a fighting heart.

Bucky Helps Out
It was Bucky Harris, after all, who helped the Big Train to some measure of satisfaction when Washington managed to get into a world series in 1924. Some deep thinking by Harris, who outwitted John J. McGraw in the final game of that series, earned for Walter the nickname he had struggled to reach.
Walter had lost his first two starts to the Giants on the toughest kind of breaks, and the toughest kind of battling competition by none other than Bill Terry. The other Washington pitchers, however, were beyond expectations, and each team won three of the first six games. It was in the seventh game that Bucky pulled his ace out of McGraw.

Harris decided to get Terry out of the Giants' lineup. The other Giant first baseman was Kelly, who snatched left-handers right merrily, but who couldn't hit Walter Johnson with a handful of shot.
Gets Terry Out
The customers were amazed when Harris announced that Warren Ogden would start the seventh game. But that was only to long to the nation. The wise-cracking grin magnet is the nation's latest craze, and, at the Saenger Theatre, starting today, he is at his best in a comedy made to order for his brand of light-hearted laugh-making.

As the butt of the Syracuse smart-alecks, Oakie chins his way to new glory. Enabled to gratify a life-long ambition to see what the other side of the "big pond" is like, Oakie boards the boat only to find himself mistaken for a famed engineer reported to be traveling incognito. From then on the fun mounts in rapid crescendo. He meets a girl in distress, saves her from two scheming rascals, accidentally stumbles on a solution for a big engineering problem, and finds himself with a wife and a fortune.
"The Social Lion," Oakie's first starring picture, increased the national clamor for more Oakie joyousness. "The Sap From Syracuse" is the climax to all the fun. Here, as in "Sweetie," where his singing of "Alma Mammy" wowed audiences off of their seats, Oakie sings "I wish I Could Sing a Love Song," and suits action to the words by trying.

Ginger Rogers, the cigarette-smoking girl of "Young Man of Manhattan," here has another role as a youthful dramatist. Her mission in the picture is to capture Oakie's heart and the methods this young sophisticated maiden uses on the naive boy from the backwoods would knock off many a man of the world. The rest of the supporting cast is composed of veteran stage actors, many of them drafted from the original stage cast of "The Sap From Syracuse," which last season kept Broadway roaring for months. A. Edward Sutherland, maker of "The Social Lion," also made this picture.

Farmers Conserve

Feed For Winter
Large Acreage Oats and Other Green Crops to Be Planted
Farmers in Hempstead county are doing everything in their power to conserve feed for the livestock this winter according to County Agent Lynn Smith. Corn stover has been saved and is being saved wherever possible. The meadows are very much shorter this year than last, but all the hay which it is possible to get has been put up for feed. This effort on the part of farmers to meet the emergency is to be commended since it has been outside the power of human beings to control the disastrous weather conditions.
A heavy acreage of oats and rye will be planted for fall and winter grazing provided arrangements can be made to secure seed. An effort is now under way to cooperate with outside agencies and to get this planting seed into the county in order to meet this great feed emergency which threatens the sacrifice of livestock at ruinous prices. A strenuous effort must be put forth by every individual and by every agency in the county to carry us over this extreme situation. Further information relative to what is done will be disseminated at the earliest possible moment.

The Hollywood Story

COPYRIGHT 1930

by NEA SERVICE Inc.

by ERNEST LYNN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DAN RORIMER, temperamental young man of Hollywood, can't get along with the studio manager at Continental Pictures and tears up his contract as scenario writer and asks to be freed. But he isn't. Dan has become so interested in ANNE WINTER, a young girl from Tulsa, Okla., who is working as an extra, she has had stage experience, and she knows enough to warrant a screen test at Grand United studios.

Rorimer, former newspaper man from New York, lives with PAUL COLLIER, who writes a daily movie column for a string of newspapers. Anne lives with MONA and EVA. EVA is a rather bitter, she does not get enough work to make a living, and Dan suspects that there may be some sort of tragedy in her life.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI

THE dance floor was a vast place. Paul Collier had described it as being "a couple of acres" in area, and Dan told him he had only mildly exaggerated.

There was a sprinkling of sailors, dancing or lounging in chairs near the soda fountain. "The fleet's not in," Collier explained to Mona and Eva, "or you'd see enough of them to man a battleship."

They remained there for a couple of hours of dancing and watching others dance. The orchestra played with unwavering frequency and there were the inevitable few couples trying to show off. Their exaggerated grotesque maneuvers were vastly entertaining to Collier. He laughed a great deal and declared that it was more fun than a show.

Mona said it reminded her of some of the places she had been to in Chicago. "You know, where the dance tickets sell for ten cents apiece. I was just a kid then. Gee, it makes me homesick."

Collier laughed at her. "Just a kid, did you say?" And Mona made a face.

It was after midnight when they got back to the bungalow, and Anne was waiting up. Rorimer knew a queer feeling of guilt, as though he had been spying on her, when she informed him that she had been out to dinner with Mr. Hurley.

"We went to the Montmartre," she said.

Dan managed to get her aside and tell her of the invitation to Martin Collins' party. "It's a real person, Anne; you'd better come."

SHE said she would be glad to go. "Did Mona tell you I tried to reach you on the phone this evening?"

Dan nodded. "She told me the good news too. I'm mighty glad. How did your voice sound to you? You heard it, of course."

"It sounded—" Anne stopped, and she laughed. "You'll think me sweetened, Dan. It sounded good. I'm so thrilled I hardly know where I am. Mr. Hurley said that when he heard the play-back he decided he was going to let me have a song. . . . Dan, I can hardly believe it! I didn't think I'd dare to try to sing!"

"Your friend is not a bit hard on the eyes. Where have you been hiding her all this time?"

Anno Winter's dark eyes shone with excitement.

He looked at her gravely, holding her sparkling eyes with his own. "I wasn't fooling," he told her, "when I said there was something in your voice that would get them. You've got something, Anne."

"You mean my singing, Dan?"

"Everything," he assured her, and Anne smilingly told him that that made her feel better.

"Because I'd be awfully disappointed if they just wanted me to sing and dance. After all, you see, I came out here with certain pretensions to being an actress. And I hope to be given a chance to act."

"You should worry about what kind of a ladder they give you to climb," Dan said. "You're bound for the top, Anne. . . . Isn't that right, Paul?" he demanded, and he swung around toward Collier.

Paul was sitting on the sofa between Mona and Eva, carrying on an animated argument with the red-haired Mona. "Sure, that's right," he said, looking up briefly. "What did he say, Anne?"

Anno laughed. "He just said something very nice, Paul."

"Nothing tough about that," said Collier, and he picked up his hat and grabbed Dan by the arm. "Come on, give the girls a break and let them get some sleep."

Driving homeward, Dan told Collier that he soon might have his opportunity to carry a story about Anne in his column. "Hurley told her he's going to give her a song, and she'll probably have a dance with it. When it's all set you might give the little girl a big break."

two bits they sold the last piece at lunch."

MARTIN COLLINS, Dan learned, lived at the crest of one of the numerous winding uphill drives in Beverly Hills. Collins had sent him an invitation with a map drawn on it, but despite its explicit directions, Rorimer lost his way twice; and twice he had to descend the hills to the main road and take his bearings over.

"This time," he informed Anne, "I'm going to keep my mind on where we're going, instead of on my passenger, and take a look at the signs." And he began then to make use of his spotlight. "Collins," he said, "doesn't live in California; he lives in Creta. That wasn't any road we were on; that was a labyrinth."

Anno laughed. "I half expected to see a Minotaur jump out at us from behind a tree. Weren't you afraid, Dan?"

"Not a bit. The Minotaur," he said, "was a lot of bull, anyway."

Anno turned on him a swift, searching glance, saw that he preserved a solemn face. "It's a good thing you didn't laugh at that one," she said. "I think it was terrible."

"That's funny," Dan said, pretending disappointment. "I thought it was a pretty good crack. But that's the way it goes; you work hard to put over a nifty, and what do you get? Do you get a hand? No—you get a lot of destructive criticism."

"I believe," Anne said, ignoring him, "that this is the place."

"It must be," said Dan. "We've tried every other one in Beverly Hills."

He turned into the driveway behind a line of parked automobiles, and he jumped out and gave Anne Winter his hand, and they walked beneath the shadows of palms and into the light that drifted across the lawn.

"You're beautiful tonight, Anne," he said, with an admiring look.

HE looked rather well himself, in his Tuxedo and his Panama. Paul Collier, who had watched his toilet with critical eye, had pronounced him acceptable, and Anne's eyes had approved him.

Collins' new house was Spanish in design. It was impressive. The Japanese butler who admitted them took them toward the patio, where the director and his wife were sitting with their guests, and Collins jumped up at once and came to ward them, bringing his wife with him, holding her by the hand.

Rorimer had met her before, and she welcomed him cordially. "I'm especially glad to see Dan Rorimer again!" she exclaimed. "I'm especially glad to see the lady."

Dan laughed. "Miss Winter," he said, introducing her, and a moment later Mrs. Collins took Anne out with her.

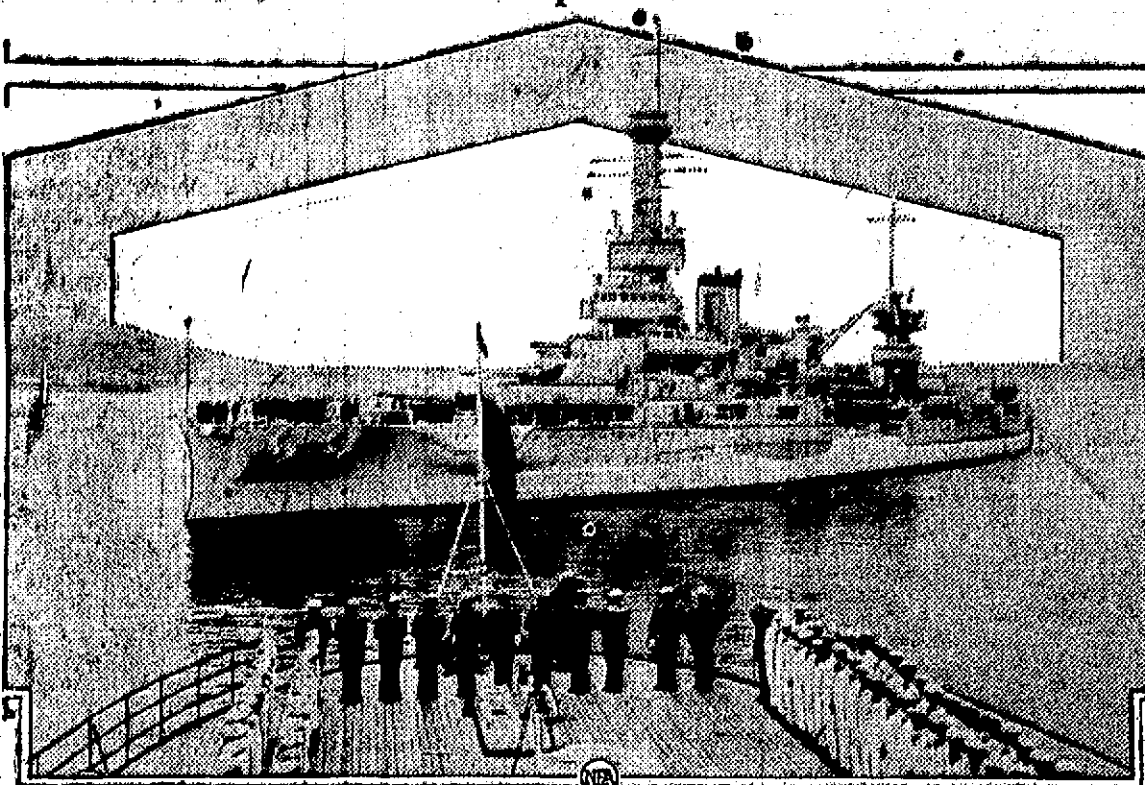

Martin Collins took Dan by the arm and headed him toward the patio. "Your friend," he assured his guest, "is not a bit hard on the eyes. Where have you been hiding her all this time? Is she in pictures? If she's not, she ought to be."

"I thought I had told you about Anne Winter," Dan said. "She's new; she's over at Grand United."

His tone was casual enough, but he knew for a brief second an intense pride in being able to say that Anne was "over at Grand United." It was infinitely more satisfactory than saying she was an extra.

When U. S. Warship Visited German Port

Desdly enemies in the war 12 years ago, American and German sailors are shown here saluting each other at the U. S. S. Arkansas, flagship of the U. S. fleet, passed the German ship Hassen in the Kiel canal. The German sailors are shown in the foreground.

the barn to feed and water Beck and Dobbin, stumble over a plow in the dim light of the dawn, hitch up and go out for a day of walking in his fields. It might be called walking, but if you've spent any time at it, you know that it's hard work.

That's the way it was back in the good old days of the '90's when Ma wore 14 petticoats out to chop cotton, and Pa hadn't dreamed there was any way to combat army worms and boll weevils.

But in this day of modern power farming, the salvation of the farmer has been recognized as the all purpose Farmall and its equipment. This tractor is being utilized in steadily increasing numbers in Arkansas and other important agricultural states of the South, because it saves labor, reduces production costs, and speeds up so many of the important jobs on the farm.

When one considers the fact that in 1929, 4,000,000 acres of Arkansas farm land was in cotton, it can readily be seen why the number of tractors in use in the state is on the increase. With a production last year of 1,400,000 bales, Arkansas ranked third as a cotton producing state, making cotton one of the big money crops.

Why are so many Arkansas planters beginning to use labor saving machinery? That's an easy one. . . . planters in this state are unsatisfied with the old system of farming, and they are being forced to cut production costs in order to realize a profit at the prevalent market. Relief is being found through the use of labor-saving machinery.

Consider present conditions. The drought has already hurt the cotton crop, and now worms are reported to have infested cotton in several parts of the state. Farmers are guarding the balance of their crop closely. They are turning to the Farmall and the McCormick-Deering duster, using them to spread poison over their cotton at the rate of 60 rows at a time, or 100 acres an hour. The dust reaches every part of the plant, insuring the worms and weevils of a good dose of poison.

Sixty rows at a time! It seems almost like a fairy tale compared with the old way of mounting a blower and a man on the back of a mule; together they meandered down through the field, dusting one row at a time.

They Wanted Company

ROANOKE, Va., Aug. 15.—(UP)—James Brown cast with two fishing lines. One of them was baited with a minnow, but the other had nothing but a hook. Brown says he had put a prayer on the hook however. Suddenly there was a yank at the minnowless hook; he pulled it in, to find two trout on the end. A game warden was on hand to net the fish, each of which measured thirteen inches, and to verify the story.
